Gap years can be defined as a transition period prior to pursuing graduate school or establishing a career. Students choose this intentional period of time to gain skills, prepare for exams, or to obtain hands-on experiences in relation to their future career goals.

SHOULD YOU CONSIDER TAKING A GAP YEAR?

Can you identify with these statements?

- I’m not sure what to do after graduation
- I want to go to graduate school, but I’m not sure which type of program to pursue
- I would like to gain more experience to enhance my graduation school applications

If so, then a gap year might be just what you need!

Questions to Consider

Location
- Where would I like to have a gap year experience?
- Should I work abroad or stay in the United States?

Program type
- What type of experience am I looking for?
- What do I hope to take away from this?
- How will I benefit my career goals?
- What kind of programs would I prefer: social service, health, environmental, research, education, community development, arts and culture, advocacy, or public service

Program Length
- How much time am I willing to commit for a gap period?
- Am I looking for summer, full year, or multiple years?

Paid or Unpaid
- Will my student loans be postponed if I participate in this program?
- Will I pile on more debt?
- Is a gap experience realistic and suitable to my personal circumstances?

Please note that many programs have early deadlines. Be sure to research and prepare accordingly.

Taking advantage of this time may include:

- Exploring an interest or fulfilling a dream you may not be able to pursue in the future
- Developing transferable skills through real-life experiences
- Learning more about yourself through self-evaluation
- Making an impact within a community by volunteering or joining a meaningful organization
- Gaining exposure to different cultures
- Studying for entrance exams such as the LSAT, MCAT, or GREs in preparation for graduate or professional school
- Exploring career fields
